The Three Primary Title Products Available

1. The Title Exam

The title exam is an investigation of the public records concerning the subject property. In addition to determining ownership of the title, the examination also reveals any mortgage or liens currently on the property. Finally it will determine if there are any conditions which would interfere with the buyer taking title of the property.

2. The Owner's Policy of Title Insurance

The Owner's Fee Policy goes beyond the mere reporting of what the official County records disclose as to the property's ownership right, its liens, easements and restrictions. Unlike the title guaranty which is limited to the scope of its protection, a title insurance policy issued to a purchaser protects that individual from hidden or unrecorded matters that would not turn up in a search of the County records. Title Insurance would protect the property owner from suits arising from fraudulent transactions, forgeries or missing heirs in the prior chain of title leading up to the purchase. Even claims attributed to mistakes in the County records would be covered under an Owner's policy title insurance. This product is highly recommended whenever real estate is being purchased.

3. Lenders or Mortgage Policy of Title Insurance.

Most Lenders requires a Lender's or Mortgage (loan) Policy whenever you purchase property, or refinance an existing loan, by borrowing funds. The mortgage Policy insures the new lender that when it makes its loans to you it will end up having a first and best lien position on your property. Unlike an Owner's policy of title insurance, the amount of insurance coverage declines as the mortgage balance is paid down. Once your loan is paid off, the mortgage policy expires.

When you purchase an owner's and lender's policy of title insurance together, the lender's insurance will only cost an additional $100.00 over the price charged for your Owner's policy, assuming your loan does not exceed the purchase price of the property.

Specialized Services You May Need

With the transaction nearly completed, it is important to realize that there are specialized services that may be required before closing. Many of these are elective, or not required; however, depending on the type or location of the transaction, some may be necessary to complete the transaction.

Typically, the elective or optional services are items agreed upon between the Buyer and Seller as a condition of the sale. These should be documented on the Purchase Agreement. Usually these services include Home Warranty, Pest Inspection, Home Inspection and Well Septic Inspection. Sometimes the aforementioned special services will be mandatory. This usually occurs when the transaction involves government financing such as VA or FHA.

Examples of required services are appraisals, and point of sale inspections. These services will be performed as a condition of the sale by the lender or local government agency. At your request, we can provide you with a list of local vendors.

APPRAISALS

The cost of the appraisal is typically covered by the buyer and is usually ordered by their lending institution, unless otherwise stated. There are many reasons for both Buyers and Sellers to seek a reliable estimate of the market value of a home. The seller wants to know that he or she can set a reasonable price, while the buyer seeks an appraisal so he or she will not be over paying for the home. Financial Institutions insist on an appraisal to determine the amount of money they can lend to an applicant. These appraisals are also used for the purposes of taxation and insurance.

SURVEYS

Surveys are typically required on platted land (subdivisions). Call Maximum Title & Escrow Services, Inc to see if your property is required to be surveyed by the County Engineer's Office. Land Survey's are used to determine the boundaries and land areas by setting corner markers on monuments, and to obtain boundary information required for both record deed descriptions and for plotting parcels of real property. There are different types of surveys that have been developed to meet various demands (Mortgage Location Surveys, ALTA and Title Surveys, and Stake/Boundary Surveys); it is important to note that they are completely different. Surveys often take time to complete. Therefore, it is important to order your survey early to avoid having your transaction delayed.

Mortgage Location Surveys

These surveys are for the benefit of the Lenders and Title Agencies only. They allow the Lender or Title Agency to learn if the improvements in which they are placing a mortgage are located on the correct property. It further allows the Title Agency to provide additional coverage to the lenders in such areas as encroachments, easements, rights of the parties in possession, and potential mechanic's liens. This survey does not require property pins to be staked or set; therefore, the Buyer of real estate does not learn the exact location of boundary lines and cannot use the survey to construct improvements on the property.

ALTA and Title Surveys

The majority of surveys are ALTA (American Land Title Agency) Land Title Surveys. They are mainly for the benefit of Title Agencies, Lenders, and Home Buyers. They show all principle improvements to the property, including, improvements to the home itself as well as the garage. Please note that the boundaries are rarely staked as in a Stake /Boundary Survey.

Stake/ Boundary Survey

This survey is for the benefit of the homeowners and buyers of real estate. The purpose of this survey is to allow the intended user of the property to establish the exact location of all property corners and boundary lines. This type of survey is highly recommended if the homeowner wants to construct additional improvements on the property such as a garage, pools, fences, sheds, fountains, etc. A boundary survey is typically performed for homebuyers only and does not show improvements to the property and their relationship to the property lines. Please Note that recent legislation requires that a boundary survey be completed for two different reasons: a) whenever the land being transferred is only part of the original conveyance (in other words, if the legal description is changing from the seller's deed when they originally purchased the property). b) if the prior conveyance has a "survey required" stamp on the deed.

Home Inspection

As either Buyer or Seller, the property transaction is probably the largest transaction you have ever considered. Often, during the process, it is mutually agreed upon to have a detailed home inspection performed so that both parties are assured that the state of the property is agreeable. A written report is used and usually contains the following:

- structural condition
- electrical, plumbing, hot water heater
- general interior condition
- insulation & ventilation
- basement, kitchen and bathrooms
- windows & doors (external)
- ceilings, walls and doors
- general exterior; roof, gutters, chimney,
- lead & radon testing (optional)
- lead based paint

Pest Inspection

The requirement for Pest Inspection occurs for a variety of reasons. Lenders doing VA or FHA transactions require that “Wood Destroying Pest Inspection” report be done as part of the loan requirements. Also, many lenders making “conventional loans” may require an inspection based on geographic areas and style of construction. The Lender will let the Buyer know what their requirements are. Lastly, the inspection may be a condition of the purchase agreement Buyer and Seller.

Well & Septic Inspection

This inspection can either be required by the Lender or a condition of the sales agreement.

Frequently Asked Questions-FAQ

Q: What is title Insurance?

A: Title Insurance is the application of the principles of insurance, to risks that exist in all real estate transactions. When purchasing a home, you buy more than the structure itself. You are also buying the land, which has had owners before you. This is known as the “chain of title”. This chain can have defects that can affect ownership, and title insurance protects the buyer against those defects.

Q: What are some of those risks?

A: There are two categories of risk: hidden hazards and human errors. Hidden hazards are defects including forgery, incompetence of the grantor or mortgagor, and unknown heirs, fraud, and impersonation. Human errors are those that will always be with us, i.e., typographical errors etc.

Q: How is Title Insurance different from other types of Insurance?

A: The main difference is that most insurance is geared to protect you from potential future problems. Title insurance protects you from things that have already happened, but have the possibility of affecting your purchase. Title insurance is designed to protect you from future losses, court battles and legal fees as a result of events that have happened in the past.

Q: If I have an attorney examine the title, can he or she assure me that my title is good?

A: As mentioned earlier, not all potential problems can be ascertained by the investigation of public records. There are many hidden hazards that an attorney will be unable to foresee. We always recommend the counsel of an attorney, and title insurance to secure you have ownership of the property.

Q: How does Title Insurance help protect my home investment?

A: The most significant advantage of Title Insurance is that it places the assets of a corporation behind the title to your home. If attacked, the title will be defended without costs to you. If the title defect falls within the coverage under the title policy and it is unable to be removed you will be reimbursed, up to the face amount of your policy, for any financial loss incurred.

Q: How do you figure annual premium?

A: With Title Insurance there is no annual premium. A one time fee, based on the amount of the sale, is paid upon implementation of the policy and is good for as long as you own your home.
